IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my nephew, Gerald M. Harvey, who passed away three years ago, Oct. 30th, 1953.

No morning dawns, no night returns,
But what I think of you.
Memories drift to scenes long passed,
Time goes on but memories last.
A loving thought, a secret tear,
Keeps your memory ever dear.

Precious memories, how they linger,
How they ever flood my soul.
In the stillness of the midnight,
Precious sacred scenes unfold.

No one knows the bitter pain,
I have suffered since I lost you.
Life has never been the same.
—Aunt Ida.

Explanation of Amendments To Be Voted on Tuesday

Voters will be handed three ballots when they go to the polls on November 6. One will be the presidential baloit. The second will be the congressional ballot, and the third contains three separate proposals for separate amendments to the Virginia Constitution.

The first proposed amendment changes the date for the ending of the Governor's term and the beginning of the new term. Under Section 69 of the Constitution of Virginia, the Governor "shall hold office for a term commencing on the third Wednesday in January next succeeding his election and ending on the Tuesday after the second Wednesday in January in the fourth year thereafter." Under this section, if something were to happen to the Governor elect after he was elected and before he was inaugurated, Virginia could be conceivably without a Governor as under Section 69 the Governor's authority terminates on Tuesday after the second Wednesday in January in the 4th year whether his successor is ready to be inaugurated or not. The proposed amendment simply changes Section 69 to provide that a Governor's term shall begin on the Saturday after the second Wednesday in January next succeeding his election but shall not end in the fourth year thereafter until a moment immediately after the inauguration of his successor. The contingency envisioned by this amendment may never arise but certainly no harm will be done by adopting the amendment and some good would be accomplished if the Governor elect ever died before he was inaugurated.

The second proposal deals with Section 169 of the Constitution of Virginia. Under that section, a tax on personal property is imposed by the several counties and cities of Virginia. The change proposed provides that the General Assembly may define as a separate subject of taxation household goods and personal effects and may allow the governing bodies of counties, cities and towns to exempt or partially exempt such property from taxation. In other words, the proposed changes do not repeal the personal property tax. It simply authorizes the General Assembly to pass the necessary legislation to allow the Board of Supervisors or the Town Council to abandon the household goods and personal or to reduce the taxes on The theory behind the being that inasmuch as is derived from household that they should not be taxed ever, the amendment is and even if passed the next ing body will have to continue the tax or abandon The third proposal would the Constitution of Virginia in the present Constitution that free transportation and phone services for members State Corporation Commission be provided by certain public ty corporations. My interest is that the Corporation Com has long ago abandoned the lege of getting free transp and free telephone service public utilities. The purpose amendment is to provide the Corporation Commission

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh
Fastest "News Service" in Town!
Had a frantic wire from Washington yesterday—saying that the local Congressman was making a surprise visit and a short speech. Could I get the word around fast?
No time for a special edition of the Clarion, so I turned to the fastest "news service" in town . . . Dandy Taylor. He spent an hour telephoning his Lodge and Court House cronies—all pretty fair prospects—and the rest is history. Biggest turnout ever.
As a newspaperman, I hate to admit it—but facts are facts. The kindys of this world aren't nearly quicker news spreaders than our paper . . . they've even got better circulation.
From where I sit, some of us would rather talk than eat, while others are close-mouthed . . . just as some of us like coffee and others prefer a glass of beer. There's a lot to be said for both attitudes. But if you go in for gab—don't talk against someone just because you don't happen to agree with him on some question of personal choice. Use your own "good censorship."

FARM NEWS

By J. A. Smith, County Agent

A new combination treatment, using the antibiotic aureomycin with sulfamethazine, has proven 100 per cent effective in preventing mortality of chicks infected with cecal coccidiosis under experimental conditions.

Poultry disease researchers at V. P. I., reporting on USDA tests, say affected chicks treated with these two drugs made faster gains than healthy ones fed the same ration without the treatment.

Most favorable results of the treatments came from feeding 100 grams of aureomycin per ton of feed with 0.125 per cent sulfamethazine. No deaths occurred in chicks given this treatment, compared with a mortality rate of 43 per cent in the inoculated, untreated group.

Chicks affected with cecal coccidiosis usually show no symptoms until the fourth day of infection, and deaths generally occur in the fifth day. To produce worth while benefit the aureomycin - sulfamezatine treatment must be started at the time the chicks are exposed to infection.

Farming without fertilizer is not profitable. Using too much or too little also cuts down on the profit.

About the only way you will know how much lime and fertilizer to use is to take a soil sample and send to the VPI soils testing laboratory for analysis.

Now would be a good time to collect samples from land to be planted next spring. Beat the rush and do it now.

WEATHER CHANGE BRINGS ON HIGHER DISEASE INCIDENCE

The change of seasons brings the need for watchfulness for livestock disorders.

Animals are much like humans in that they become more than usually susceptible to certain diseases when there's a change in the weather.

For instance, a calf kept in a barn during the daytime with the windows and doors closed may then become too cold when the temperature drops at night. The result? It could be pneumonia, a disease which is more common at this time of year than at any any other time. To guard against pneumonia, guard the animal against widely fluctuating temperatures.

Another danger this time of the year is forage which has been nipped by frost. Under certain conditions, any frozen feed will develop a toxicity which can cause digestive upsets, and sometimes death. Of particular danger is a pasture where the tips of grass are frozen. Don't let animals overeat on any frozen pasture. Be sure they have plenty of dried forage.

The county agent warns against any sudden change in diet. Be sure to provide through supplements, the nutrients the animals have been getting on pasture.

Artificial Breeding

There're lots of advantages to artificial insemination. Perhaps the biggest advantage is that it makes the use of carefully selected proved sires possible in the smallest, or largest, herds at a price that the dairyman can afford to pay.

The bulls in the artificial breeding center have already sired high producing daughters, and they are known to be good. By the time a dairyman finds out for himself whether or not his bull is any good, he has lost three or four years.

Artificial breeding is an aid in disease control. All breeding center sires are disease-free, and every possible precaution is taken by the technician to keep from spreading disease from farm to farm.

If you've tried artificial insemination, and it hasn't worked in your herd the trouble likely can be chalked up to some phase of your individual farm management.

It's easy enough to correct any trouble at the bull stud; or with the technician; or even with the cows, if the dairyman will call a veterinarian.

A VERY SPECIAL BABY

This is a very special baby. He is one of the happy babies in the care of the Children's Home Society of Virginia, and he is happy because he is going to have a home with loving parents. This is possible because people of Virginia have contributed thousands of dollars to the work of this statewide adoption agency. The campaign for funds is now in progress in Appomattox County.

November 6 is "hiring day"—your chance to pick your employees for City Hall, Statehouse, and White House, too. Look over the applications now. Read. Think. Argue with your friends —they're all interested as you. Then—see you at the polls!

One Million Telephones In State of Virginia Now

Virginia now has one million telephones, according to a joint announcement by Dennis B. Draper, President of the Virginia Independent Telephone Association representing sixty-one independent telephone companies in Virginia, and J. Rhodes Mitchell, Vice President of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia. The announcement was made at the annual convention of the V. I. T. A. in Roanoke.

Draper presented to Jesse W. Dillon, representing Governor Thomas B. Stanley, a telephone symbolic of the one millionth telephone which will be installed in the Governor's office at Richmond within a few days. The telephone is a six - key instrument in brown color to match the decor of the Governor's office. Mounted on the telephone are the seals of the V. I. T. A. and The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia and a plaque commemorating the One Millionth Telephone in Virginia.

In an address to the V. I. T. A. Convention, Mitchell recognized the high degree of cooperation existing among the sixty-one independent telephone companies and the C. and P. as contributing greatly to the advancement in telephone service for all Virginians. Anyone in Virginia can readily call anyone else, and in many cases dial directly to the distant telephone. The independent telephone companies are working with the Bell System in making possible a uniform nationwide numbering system.

The growth of the telephone industry has kept pace with Virginia's telephone requirements. In 1920 there were only 133,000 telephones in Virginia. It took nearly twenty years to double this number to something under 300,000.
